

Appendix A - Suggested Training Schedule

Suggested Training Schedule

This suggested training schedule is based on the assumption that handlers will train their dogs every day for a total of thirty minutes, which can be broken down into three individual ten minute training sessions.

One could train one behavior from beginning to finish, then train the next behavior, etc. In the suggested schedule there are a variety of exercises to work on each week. This is to help keep training interesting and to reduce frustration if your dog is having great difficulty with one exercise--there are other exercises that he may find easier you can train in the same time period.

If you do prefer to work on one exercise at a time, the exercises are presented in order in the guide so that if you train them in that order, your dog will have the prerequisites needed from the earlier exercises in order to do the later exercises. For instance, your dog will need to know sits and downs before you play the Waiting Game with him.

The great magic of dog training is that each handler creates it by working with her dog. The more you work with your dog, the better you will be able to communicate with your dog, the more responsive your dog will be to you and the more interesting the two of you will find each other. It doesn't really matter what you teach your dog as long as you keep working your dog. You could teach him to shake hands, roll over, say his prayers and bop the standing clown balloon with his nose to create this magic. The advantage to the exercises presented in this guide is that they are useful skills for your dog to have.

Week One

Doggie Zen (Leave It)

- Step One - p. 10

Goal: Your dog waits for you to place the treat in his mouth five times in a row.

- Step Two - p. 10

About the Author

Originally from Iowa City, Iowa, M. Shirley Chong has been training dogs since 1982 and started using clicker training in 1992. Clicker training is based on the principles of operant conditioning and uses positive reinforcement to help the dog learn behaviors.

The Clicker Cookbook begins a new series of general obedience and training guides Shirley plans to write. She has also written "Just Plain Clicker Sense" and is working on a third book detailing her training method for competitive obedience. She has produced two dog-training videos.

Shirley also specializes in analyzing dog behavior and correcting problem behaviors, using customized approaches based on the specific dog. She has owned German Shepherds, Belgian Tervuren, Belgian Sheepdogs and Borzoi. She currently shares her home with two Belgian Tervuren, three Belgian Sheepdogs, one German Shepherd, and four cats; oh, and one husband (a rescue). She has rescued and re-homed over 60 dogs of many breeds.

Shirley is co-owner and administrator of two Internet mailing lists - Clicktrain, for those interested in clicker training and all aspects of operant conditioning, and K-9 Cuisine, for discussions of dog diets. She has a Web site - www.shirleychong.com -- loaded with training tips, archives of the best Clicktrain posts, and training photos.
